HER HEROISM; · OR Twixt Love and Duty.

When Eleanore Gray, the heiress, left boarding-school she invited her schoolmate, Dora Alton, to come and live with her for an indefinite period. Eleanore was an orphan and lived in a lovely villa overlooking a mountain stream that skirted a railroad curve. The two girls enjoyed themselves in spite of the lonely situation, and for company they received visits very often from Mark Eldridge who had been appointed Miss Gray's guardian and executor on her fath-

COAL OIL JOHNNY'S BOOT-BLACK.

[From the Philadelphia Press.] On the Oil Creek flats between Titusville and Oil City is situated years ago, and the farm was long considered valueless for oil purposes. With the later improved methods of producing oil, however, the old place is being reclaimed and is once more figuring among the valuable oil farms of the region. It is now owned by J. W. Wait, who was a street urchin at Rouseville, a mile from the farm, when "Coal Oil Johnny', was in the zenith of his wild career. As a boy, young Wait frequently blacked Johnny Steele's boots, or held his team, and received for the service anywhere from $5 to $50, whatever happened to suit the whim of the spendthrift, who believed there was no end to his suddenly acquired riches. It was not many years till "Coal Oil Johnny" was a laborer, working for a dollar a day. There are about a dozen new wells drilled on the place, and every one of them is prefitable. The place will make young Wait a rich man. He has been operating the property about a year and values it at $60,000. He has a production of 1,600 barrels a month.
